

Getting legal advice

About this factsheet and who it is for

There are many reasons why you may want to seek legal advice. When choosing your adviser it is important to check they have experience in the problem or issue you want help with and that they are suitably qualified to offer you the assistance you need. This factsheet aims to help you find a suitable legal adviser.

The artwork on the front of this factsheet was done by an older artist for EAC's over 60s Art Awards.

Solicitors often specialise in an area of the law such as, buying and selling property, wills, criminal cases or family problems including divorce and separations. It is important to ensure that the solicitors you choose has experience in the area you need advice. The Law Society can provide details of solicitors in your area that specialise in the area of law you need.

- The Solicitors Regulatory Authority (SRA), the independent regulatory body of The Law Society of England and Wales, can give you details of solicitors in your area including the areas of law they practice.

Barristers are able to accept instructions from the public since 2004 under the Bar Public Access Scheme. Some limitations have been placed on them when doing this, such as; you must be referred to a solicitor if it would be in your best interests based on the nature of your case. A Barrister is not permitted to write or receive letters on your behalf or sign documents or handle money for you but can advise you in respect of your case and can appear in court on your behalf.

- The Bar Council can help if you are looking to instruct a barrister.

Other commercial organisations can offer legal services such as will writing by people who may not be legally qualified; these organisations may not be governed by an independent regulatory body. If you choose to use such an organisation you may want to check that they have public indemnity insurance to provide compensation if things go wrong.

Other commercial non-solicitor organisations offer services like claiming compensation for personal injury claims, industrial injury, employment and redundancy, criminal injury, housing disrepair or mis-sold financial products and often advertise as 'no win, no fee', these organisations must be authorised to provide these services by the Ministry of Justice:

Your local Citizens Advice Bureau and telephone directory may also have details for providers of legal advice.

Paying for legal advice can be done in several ways, legal advice can often be charged for by the hour this may be when the amount of work needed may be variable or not easy to predict. More standard work such as simple wills or conveyancing may be able to be done on a fixed fee basis. Other types of advice may be available on a conditional fee arrangement or 'no win, no fee'. This type of agreement is usually for compensation claims or personal injury cases. Anyone you approach for legal advice should also be able to advise you if you may be eligible for Legal Aid.

Legal Aid can help meet the costs of legal advice, family mediation and representation in a court or tribunal. You'll usually need to show that:

- your case is eligible for legal aid
- the problem is serious
- you can't afford to pay for legal costs

You could, for example, get legal aid if:

- you or your family are at risk of abuse or serious harm, eg domestic violence or forced marriage
- you're at risk of homelessness or losing your home
- you've been accused of a crime, face prison or detention
- you're being discriminated against
- you need family mediation
- you're adding legal arguments or bringing a case under the Human Rights Act

You'll usually need to show that you can't afford to pay for this help. You may have to pay some money towards the legal costs of your case or pay costs back later. Your legal adviser will usually apply for legal aid on your behalf.

Ombudsman services look into complaints about an organisation. Using an ombudsman is a way of trying to resolve a complaint without going to court. There are a number of ombudsmen covering the areas below:

- Parliamentary and Health Service
- Local Government
- European
- Legal
- Property
- Housing
- Prison and Probation
- Energy
- Telecommunications

An ombudsman should be a member of the British and Irish Ombudsman Association (BIOA), they are independent and impartial and free of charge. Usually you need to have used the organisations complaints procedure before they will consider a case. If the ombudsman finds your case is justified they will recommend what the organisation should do to put it right. An ombudsman cannot force an organisation to accept their recommendations, but they almost always do.

- The Ombudsman Association provides a search facility to find the right ombudsman or complaint handler.

About FirstStop Advice

FirstStop is a free information and advice service designed to help older people decide how best to meet their needs for support, care and suitable housing. It is provided jointly by a growing number of national and local organisations and it is led by the charity, Elderly Accommodation Counsel (EAC).

About FirstStop Financial Advice

Working together, EAC and its partners in FirstStop Advice provide comprehensive information and guidance to help you afford the care, accommodation or services you need.

FirstStop's national Advisors are trained to advise on:

- What you may be entitled to in state benefits and financial help from your local authority;
- Whether you may be entitled to help with your care costs;
- Ways of making your income and capital go further;
- Services that are provided free by local and national voluntary organisations;
- Homesharing, co-housing and other mutual support networks.

A key FirstStop partner organisation is the Society of Later Life Advisers (SOLLA).

SOLLA's members are regulated Financial

Advisers who specialise in providing financial advice to older people, they also adhere to the Society's Code of Best Practice.

If you decide, after speaking to us, that you would like advice from a SOLLA member, we can provide local details to you.

(Neither EAC or FirstStop has any financial interest in SOLLA or its member IFAs)
